

JOC/IOEM Joint Staff SITREP 19 April 2018

5 Day Forecast

Current Situation

The IDEOC is in Monitoring Status.

18 Apr 18: Regional Emergency Management Officials gathered in Boise, Idaho April 18th to discuss new initiatives throughout the region including planned exercises in 2018 and 2019.

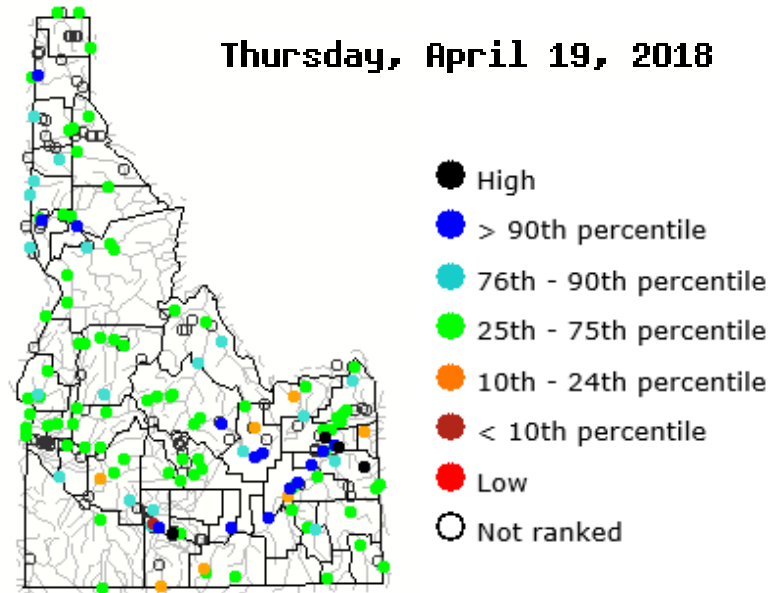

From Left to right: Idaho Office of Emergency Management Director Brad Richy, Alaska Division of Homeland Security and Emergency Management Director Mike Sutton, Washington Emergency Management Division Deputy Director Jason Marquiss (back), FEMA Region 10 Administrator Mike O'Hare Oregon Emergency Management Deputy Director Matt Marheine

FEMA Region 10 Administrator Mike O'Hare greets local, state, regional, and federal partners at the Regional Interagency Steering Committee (RISC) meeting in Boise, Idaho. O'Hare reinforced the importance of FEMA's new strategic plan that stresses the importance of creating, and cultivating a "Culture of Preparedness," both regionally and nationwide. FEMA's plan also calls for working to reduce the complexity of what the agency does. An additional objective is to focus on preparedness planning for catastrophic regional events including a major earthquake. Idaho, Oregon, Washington and Alaska are all in FEMA Region 10.

Daily Streamflow Conditions

Regional Weather Outlooks

North/North Central Region: Dry, mild conditions today and tomorrow. A quick moving cold front will bring precipitation chances and gusty winds tomorrow night and Saturday. Sunny for today with highs near 65F. Winds NW at 5 to 10 mph.

Southeast/Central Region: There will be scattered showers to the south, with just a few isolated showers getting this far north into Idaho and Wyoming. There will also be breezy winds locally with that low pressure passing by for tonight and through tomorrow. Highs in the low 60s today.

Southwest Region: A weak storm system brushing by will generate the possibility of an isolated shower this afternoon across southwest Idaho. We're expecting mostly cloudy skies today and breezy winds (10-20 mph) with highs in the mid 60's.

Military News

18 April 18: The Bradley is designed to transport infantry or scouts with armor protection, while providing covering fire to suppress enemy troops and armored vehicles. It's just one more tool The National Guard and U.S. Army use to fight and win our Nation's wars. We're pretty proud of our Soldiers in the 116th Cavalry Brigade Combat Team \(Official\). The unit's equipment and experienced Soldiers help make the Idaho National Guard a relevant and capable force around the globe when called upon by the president of the United States.

19 Apr 18: Governor C. L. "Butch" Otter and Brig. Gen. Michael Garshak addressing Soldiers and family members prior to an Idaho Army National Guard unit's deployment to Afghanistan today. (to watch video, right click to open hyperlink in Power Point attach)
