Weather Outlook
A warming trend with sunny and dry afternoons will bring very hot conditions to much of Idaho, especially on Friday and Saturday. Temperatures will be about 20 degrees above normal and more typical of conditions experienced during the hottest part of the summer. The hottest temperatures will occur during the afternoon hours in the lower elevations. These hot temperatures will cause a moderate risk to those who are sensitive to heat, especially those who are wearing additional PPE in an outdoor setting without effective cooling and/or hydration.

An upper level weather disturbance will move into the area on Saturday night and Sunday bringing cooler weather, more clouds, and a chance of showers and thunderstorms. Expect gusty winds in the vicinity of any thunderstorms, which will be an additional threat to tents, canopies, and outdoor COVID-19 screening operations.

Warm and mostly dry weather is expected across Idaho early next week on Monday, June 1 and Tuesday, June 2.
